Washington Party State Chairman in Vigorous Open Letter Calls on Republican Nominee for Governor to
Make Honest Statement and Tell
People of State Just Where He Stands and Whether He Has Any
"Entangling Alliances" With Pen-
rose.

Philadelphia, August 4.—Martin G. Brumbaugh, Republican nominee for governor, was told in an open letter addressed to him by A. Nevin Detrich to-day, that bartenders were wearing his campaign buttons and that the liquor people from the distillers and wholesalers down to the retailers were raising money and working for his election.

The Washington Party State chairman told Dr. Brumbaugh that the Republican leaders were circulating the statement that the Brumbaugh declaration for local option was "only molasses to catch flies."

Detrich asked Dr. Brumbaugh just what his declaration for a workmen's compensation act meant. He called Brumbaugh's attention to the fact that State Senator William E. Crow, the man who killed the workmen's compensation act at the last session of the State legislature, was now the Republican State chairman and working ardently for Brumbaugh. Brumbaugh was also told that McNichol, the Penrose boss, was working for him; that Vare, the machine leader of Philadelphia, was for him; that the entire Republican gang was passing around the word that he was "safe."

In face of these facts, Detrich asks Dr. Brumbaugh just where he stands. "It is very important that the people of Pennsylvania are honestly advised by you as to your real position in the campaign," declares Detrich.

The Washington Party chairman asks for a prompt reply.

The open letter to Dr. Brumbaugh is as follows:

Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh,

Dear Sir:

The exigencies of the political campaign demand that certain information which you alone can give be handed promptly to the people of Pennsylvania.

In the only statement you have given the public relative to your position as a candidate, you say, first, that you have "no entangling alliances," and, second, that you favor a workmen's compensation law, a child labor law, and a local option law.

It is a well-known fact that "entangling alliances" in Pennsylvania politics mean association with the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine. Do you disown association with this machine which gave you its full and trusting support at the Republican primaries?

Do you favor the sort of workmen's compensation act which was killed by the activities of Senator William E. Crow, who is chairman of the party whose nomination you hold for governor, and which bill was the result of the labors of the Pennsylvania Industrial Commission and endorsed by the State Federation of Labor and the legislative committee of the Washington and Republican parties? Or do you merely favor a workmen's compensation act such as is satisfactory to the big corporate interests?

Do you favor a child labor law such as has been prepared and widely disseminated by the Pennsylvania Child Labor Association, of which Jasper Y. Brinton is president and Paul M. Furman secretary, or do you favor the sort of child labor legislation proposed by the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, which is headed by Joseph R. Grundy, whose mills at Bristol, Pa., are largely operated by minor children?

Do you favor a local option law with the county as a unit, such as proposed by the Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania, or do you merely favor "local option?"

Will you, if elected governor, use the power of your office to secure the passage of the above legislation which is so important to the social and industrial welfare and consequently to the real prosperity of our great state?

The above questions deserve your careful attention and prompt reply as there are many people in Pennsylvania who believe you to be a man of high character and deep moral convictions and who earnestly desire to know your real position as regards your association with the political machine which has so long and Pennsylvania in its grasp, and your real stand upon the questions of vital importance enumerated above.

Permit me to give you some facts of which you may not be aware:

Your candidacy is entirely acceptable to the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine. The leaders of the machine and their active workers are enthusiastically for you. The attaches of the various departments at Harrisburg are working for your election in season and out because of the assurance from somewhere that they will not be interfered with.

The chairman of the state committee of the Republican party who, as stated above, was the chief instrument in killing the workmen's compensation bill in the last legislature, is earnestly and enthusiastically for your election. The Grundles of Pennsylvania are just as enthusiastic and earnest in your support as are the others.

Finally, the liquor interests of Pennsylvania from the heads of the big brewing and distilling companies down through the ranks of the wholesale and retail dealers, to the bartenders and waiters in the cafes, are wearing your buttons, attempting in every way to gather support to your standard. An official of the Beerdoll Brewing Company in Philadelphia is quoted as having recently made the following statement: "The liquor interests of Pennsylvania are solidly for Brumbaugh for governor and our contributions will all go to him." Why?

Machine leaders in the state say you are "safe" on the liquor question. Senator Charles A. Snyder, of Schuylkill county, is quoted as having told the Republican committee of his county that your local option declaration was "molasses to catch flies."

It is very important that the people of Pennsylvania are honestly advised by you as to your real position in the campaign and I trust that the questions asked in this letter and the facts set forth may be carefully considered by you and that they may receive from you a prompt reply.

Very truly yours,
A. NEVIN DETRICH.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been Eating too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and du' misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they becomes sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sic headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular uric acid cases. It is inexpensive and not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

Notice to Advertisers!

A new rate for advertising will be in effect on Saturday, August 1st, 1914, and copies of this rate in pamphlet form will be ready for distribution August 1, 1914. ¶ This new rate is made necessary by the greatly increased circulation, and cost of publication of the Progress. The present circulation is about five times larger than a year ago. ¶ Many new features have been, and will be added, such as "Bud" Fisher's "Mutt and Jeff," a daily news illustration service, a free cut, or illustration service for advertisers, (proofs of which may be obtained at this office), and last but not least, our daily news service; all of which will make the Daily Progress a real up to the minute daily. ¶ The Progress goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and has an excellent circulation in most of the homes throughout the surrounding country, so that the new rate will not meet with much, if any disapproval.

FIRST HOME RUN OFF MATTY

"Wee Willie" Sudhoff Turned the Trick at the Polo Grounds, but Did Not Win His Game.

One day two young hurlers were engaged in a regular pitchers' battle. They were both right-handed, but that ended the resemblance. One was over six feet tall, the other was five feet and about two inches over.

On June 21, 1901, at the Polo Grounds, the home of the New York Giants, these two hurlers battled for five innings without allowing a run. In the sixth the visitors managed to get a man on with their midget hurler up, the little chap who had been pitching his head off and come in from his task with the sweat streaming down his face.

Brushing out his eyes with his fists, he picked up his little bat and walked up to the plate. The big pitcher smiled a rather pitying smile, but didn't let up on his speed. He flashed the ball through with all the stuff he had, and the little fellow swung at it with all the stuff he had—and his teammates declare with his eyes shut. However, an awful crack followed, and the ball sped away beyond any fielder, and the pony pitcher galloped around the bases, chasing the other fellow in.

When he reached the home plate he paused and posed for a moment, then drew himself up to his full height—five feet two inches—and grinned at the big hurler, and the big hurler

smiled back at him, but it was a smile full of astonishment, for this was the first time a home run had ever been made off the delivery of Christy Mathewson, for the big fellow was none other than the now famous "Big Six." And the midget, the little hurler who banged the ball, was "Wee Willie" Sudhoff, then pitching for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Wee Willie" was so swelled up that he forgot all about the art of pitching, and before he landed on earth again the Giants had tied the score in their half of the inning and won the game in the ninth by the score of 3 to 2. This was the only homer made off the delivery of Matty in two seasons; in the year 1902 the batters of the National failed to connect with his curves for a four-bagger. So little "Willie" wore the title proudly for a couple of seasons.

LONE SPECTATOR WAS READY

Umpire Hart Relates Peculiar Experience in Western League—Bleacherite Was "All Set."

William Hart, the new umpire in the National league, who is making good in fine fashion, has been identified with baseball more than 30 years. Until recently he still was able to pitch, and in his day he was one of the best twirlers in the business.

This is not Hart's first experience as an umpire. Several years ago he umpired in the old Western league for a season and then went back to pitching again. The veteran is full of queer stories of his experiences. Recently he told this one on himself:

"One day when I was umpiring in the Western league I got to Kansas City. The club had been going poorly, and when the game time came around there were only eight spectators in the grand stand and one man sitting in the bleachers. He had an umbrella over him, for the day was stifling hot.

"When it came time to announce the batteries, I announced them to the eight patrons in the grand stand, and then I thought I would make the announcement to the bleachers. So I walked down to where the solitary bleacherite was sitting, and, taking off my cap, I yelled:

"Ladies and gentlemen: The batteries for today are White and Black for Kansas City, Green and Brown for Omaha!"

"The one lone bleacherite made a gesture with his arm and replied:

"I'm ready. Go on with the game."

Another Pretzel Battery. Der Herr Pitcher Schaufalaufe and der Herr Catcher Ehlinghale have signed with Manager Herzog of the Cincinnati Reds.

FOR SHORT DOUBLE-HEADERS

Critic Advocates Seven Innings Each Where Two Contests are Played on Same Afternoon.

Why not limit the double-header games to seven innings each? It's a scheme that has been tried out in the Southern leagues with great success.

Two seven-inning games in one afternoon would give the average fan just about as much baseball as he could comfortably absorb. It wouldn't force the ball player to the extreme limit of his endurance, and, best of all, it would enable the fan to get home in time for a warm dinner.

Cutting the double-header games to seven innings would do no one harm. It would do plenty of good. Cutting off four innings from an afternoon's baseball session would mean lessening the playing period about one hour and, therefore, the pasture would end before darkness settled over the land.

The season of double-headers is now upon us. Every fan is keen about taking in a bargain bill, but along about the fourth or fifth inning of the second game the exhibition becomes monotonous. Of course, the greatest majority of the fans stick to the bitter finish, but they stay not so much because their ball appetite isn't satisfied, but because they want to see just how the game will finish.

Most double-headers begin about 2 p. m., allowing something over two hours for each game and a 15 minute intermission between combats. It means that play doesn't end until about 6:30. That means that the fan doesn't get home until from 7:15 to 8 p. m. owing to the delay in getting out of the crowded park and the usual delay caused by the slow moving of a fleet of special street cars. And every housewife is fully agreed that 7:15 to 8 p. m. is 'too darned late for any man to expect his wife to keep dinner simmering."

If the games were cut two innings each the playing period would be lessened about an hour, which would mean that the final innings of the second game would not have to be played by torchlight and that father would get home on time to dine with the rest of the family.

The seven-inning double-header idea probably will prove to be a popular one with the fans, and it is likely that the agitation assumes sufficient voice that the ruling powers in baseball will hear it and amend their laws so that seven-inning double-headers will be the rule starting with the 1916 season.

Fests of Sox Pitchers. A notable fact in connection with the White Sox box staff is that four of its members have pitched a one-hit game this year. The four are Scott, Cicotte, Benz, and Faber. In addition Benz has a no-hit game and Russell a two-hit game.

Many Players in One Game. Thirty-one players were in the recent game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds. The game lasted 110 minutes.

well with the material he has on hand and has met with a good reception in Cincinnati. Ames was thought to be all in when McGraw let him out, but his box work since he joined the Reds would indicate that he is far from the end of his string.

ROBBER CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS

Howe's jewelry store. Found Some of the Goods.

Etzweiler finally took the officers to the hiding place of some of the goods he had purloined. These were found in a shed at the brick works, on the top floor of which the officers found the three refrigerators which had been robbed, a water bucket and several other articles.

The police believe that they now have in custody the man who has been doing most of the petty thievery that has aroused the citizens in the past month, and that the evidence against Etzweiler is strong enough to send him over the mountain.

An Old Offender. Etzweiler was arrested on May 9, 1913, for the theft of a bicycle. He was tried at the December court and sentenced to six months in the county jail, his time expiring on June 15.

The offer of a reward of $100 made by the Jewelers Protective association for the arrest of any one robbing a member of the association will be made good, and the money will be divided between Chief McHenry and Policeman Aldey.

The police believe that petty thieving will cease in this town for the time being as the result of the arrest of Etzweiler.

The court says: A petition for a rehearing having been presented and supported by a desire of Curwensville citizens in order that the facts may be shown openly and publicly upon both sides, it is ordered that the parties present such proofs as they desire upon Monday, August 10, at 1:30 P. M.

Notice hereof to be given to R. D. Swoope, Esq., attorney for the remonstrants.

The above order applies to both of the cases in which the Curwensville men are interested.

The temperance people are preparing their cases against Edward Smith and George McMullen, of Grampian, whose licenses were granted, but who will be prosecuted at the September term on charges of alleged violations of the liquor laws.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE Vance G. Welch, of Mt. Zion, Greeted by a Host of Friends.

Mt. Zion never had a pleasanter occasion or a more cheerful crowd than that gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vance G. Welch on Tuesday as a surprise birthday party.

Relative, friends and neighbors began to arrive at about 11:00 and continued coming until all had gathered. At first Mr. Welch did not understand what it meant, but very soon it began to dawn upon him that he had reached another milestone in life, and he submitted to the inevitable and took it as a kindly remembrance of his 39th birthday.

More than eighty persons, adults, young people and children, gladdened the occasion. The dinner hour was one that will not soon be forgotten. A long table was constructed under the trees. The table was loaded with many good things, a blessing which was invoked, and then you ought to have seen the hungry crowd, a sight that would tax the capacity of the best camera. The provision was inexhaustible and the diners finally had to desist.

It was a beautiful day, and with the cheerful company and the mountain top scenery it could not help but awaken a grateful feeling in the breast to the bountiful giver of good and perfect gifts.

The day with its enjoyment will long be remembered by the friends, and the Welch family. May Mr. and Mrs. Welch live and see many more happy birthdays.

FRENCHVILLE PICNIC Clearfield County's Greatest Outing Event Comes Off Today.

The great and only Frenchville picnic was held today, and the railroads and highways were thronged with men, women and children early this morning on their way to the down-river town, on pleasure bent. Not a few candidates were noticed on their way to the picnic.

Clearfield county has numerous picnics in the course of a year, but it is the Frenchville picnic that gathers the biggest and most cosmopolitan crowd. There is always something interesting to see at the Frenchville picnic, and a great deal to be heard.

Early returns from the picnic state that it was bigger and better than ever this year, which is saying a great deal.

Mrs. George Rosser entertained a number of young people at her home on West Market street last evening, in honor of her niece, Miss Florence Ruthers, of Philadelphia. Tables for refreshments were set on the lawn, which was lighted with electric lights for the occasion. The decorations were beautiful. A violin was furnished by Sheddors and they danced in the house, while some original games furnished much amusement.

Because of the absence of Rev. and Mrs. C. R. Allenbach, the missionary meeting of the Lutheran church was made a social affair and held at Frank Chorpene's last evening. The meeting was led by Miss Larue Chorpene, the subject being, "Resources of the King". This was followed by a Bible lesson, in which all took part. Then the business part of the meeting was attended to, and delightful refreshments served.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

She tried to draw away her hands. "I love you, Kathlyn!" "No, no!" She struggled back from him.

"With all my heart and soul. You are as irresistible as breathing. And I want you for my wife, Kit!"

"No, John! Perhaps my poor father is right. A curse of some sort seems to be hanging over us. For look: how many times has everything looked bright, only to turn out like this! The cable saying that Winnie was on her way, the brigands, Ahmed's long sleep, the mistake this afternoon of the mahouts. I wonder if my own God has forsaken us?"

"Kit!"

"No, no! I refuse to let you be dragged into this. I want you to go, to go now while there is time. I command it. As you say, we cannot tell what may happen. The rebellion may prove a fizzle, but one way or the other, there will be death. I want you to leave us, for we are indeed accursed!"

The man at her side laughed. To her ears it was the same laughter she had heard in the desert. In her heart she knew that he would not go. Was she glad?

"My life is mine, Kit," he said, releasing her hands, "and I give it to you. But I promise not to speak of love again till you are safe and sound on the broad Pacific. There are Ahmed and Lal Singh and Ramabai, and I will be their lieutenant. By the Lord Harry, besides yourself there is only one thing I want: my hand round the throat of the black devil who has caused all this. He seems to bear a charmed life. Never have I had a good opportunity to get near him. But patience!"

"Let us return to father and Winnie," she said. "Besides, perhaps I ought not to have come out here at all."

And Winnie! The change which had taken place in the child was the most remarkable of all to Kathlyn. Winnie was a woman, quiet, brave, unassuming, and Kathlyn now realized that the child had been flighty simply because they had coddled her and given way to her whims in the old days. The old days! Ah, could either of them ever go back to the placid, humdrum contentment of home after all this strife?

During this talk in the garden Umballa had not been inactive. The white people could not possibly have left the city. They were still within the walls. For all that he had reasoned shrewdly regarding the house of Ramabai, he could not dismiss the possibility from his mind. So at length he ordered his captain of the guard roughly and with curses—for Umballa was not pleasant in his cups—to proceed at once to the house of Ramabai and learn if they were there, or had been to Basundalo all the servants in the house till the truth was dragged from their lips. Dead or alive!

The captain saluted and departed with his men. He was the same captain whom Umballa weeks before had marked for death because of his insolence. But the regent had dared not harm the man till real quiet was fully restored in Allahabad. And well the captain knew this, knew that his master was only biding his time and that once Umballa had his desires his (the captain's) throat would not be worth a copper piece. But the captain was a gambler, and Umballa's rupees were as necessary to him as air and water. Still, if Umballa had hidden fangs, so had he. Let the regent strike

As Bruce and Kathlyn reached the door leading into the house they were met by Ramabai, whose face was grave.

"Ah, memsahib, you ought not to have come out here. You might be seen. Perhaps Umballa is merely playing with us, cat and mouse wise. He might have had more at his tongue's end, but he was destined not to utter it. The gate was flung open violently and the servant who had been watching the street burst in with the cry:

"Soldiers!"

The colonel, Winnie and Fundita appeared. For a moment they believed that Ramabai was going to guide them to the secret gallery. But suddenly he raised his hand and stared boldly at the gate. And by that sign Bruce and the colonel understood; Ramabai had taken up the dice to make his throw. The two men put their hands to their revolvers and waited.

Soon the captain and his men came rushing in only to stop short at a sign from Ramabai.

"Captain," he began, "Is Durga Ram a good master? Does he keep his promises?"

The captain turned and eyed his men.

"Does he look out for your welfare as an honest man should, or does he simply use you as his tools and dupes? For what does he want the soldiery? To guard the weak and the oppressed from the strong, or to fortify himself in such a manner that it will be easy for him to take what money he wishes and flee? Is he a good master who persecutes for his own ends?"

"Ramabai," said the captain, "speak out your thought frankly and clearly."

Thus challenged, Ramabai said "Join our side, and tomorrow at dawn we will strike a blow for the betterment of Allahabad!"

"And what of the old man in the dungeon?" drily.

"Wait till we overthrow Umballa and the cowardly Council, then we shall speak of him. Well!" proudly and fearlessly.

"Ramabai," replied the captain, "I, too, will be frank. I will be loyal to the hand that pays me best, for I am not an Allahabad by birth. I am a mercenary. I have said it."

"Be with me on the morrow and I promise out of my own chest will I pay you your arrears and earnest money for the future. On the other hand, what will you gain by taking us prisoners to Umballa?"

"My lord's word is known. I myself will take charge of the affairs at the palace, and Umballa shall go to the burning ghats. I will announce to him that I found you not. When you arrive at the palace you will find everything in readiness. But till you come I dare not lift a hand."

And at that moment he meant every word he said. Ramabai was the richest man in Allahabad. He turned again to his men, to find that they were ready to follow Ramabai anywhere and at any time.

Ahmed, who knew the Asiatic heart thoroughly, could scarcely repress a smile. No matter. If they proved loyal to Ramabai on the morrow much would be forgiven.

The captain and his men departed, while Ramabai and his friends reentered the house, to find the imperturbable Lal Singh decked out in his lawful finery. He was Ramabai's right hand and the British raj vanished into nothingness.

"All is ready," he announced. "Dawn," replied Ramabai. "The servant go forth for the chupatties."

Dawn. The garden was filled with silent armed men. With Ramabai in the secret gallery were the chiefs. Ramabai indicated the blazing swords. "My friends, choose among these weapons. The gems are nothing, but the steel is tried and true."

Lal Singh selected the simplest, sword and shield the scabbard through his cummerbund.

As for Kathlyn, she could not keep her eyes off the beautiful chain cuirass which had once upon a time been worn by one of Fundita's forbears a warrior queen.

"Beautiful, beautiful," she exclaimed. "Fundita, may I put it on?" And tell me the story of the warrior queen. To be brave like that, to fight side by side with the man she loved!"

She put the cuirass on. Quite involuntarily her eyes roved to Bruce, who was staring at her like one entranced. The hearts of both of them leaped, but their lips remained mute. There was, however, a message in their eyes which each read with equal clearness. Oh to be free to be back in the old familiar world!

Lowly Fundita told the story. As she unfolded the tale Kathlyn experienced a strange exhilaration, unlike anything she had previously known. She wanted to snatch down one of the swords start out for the palace to stand in the midst of battle. And the odd part of it was this, exhilaration was not transient, it grew and expanded magically, like a fakir's peep tree.

The sky was yellow when the little army started off upon its desperate campaign. A guard was left behind for the women.

"God be with you," said Kathlyn, as she gave her hand to Bruce.

"Kathlyn, I'm afraid of you," he said earnestly.

"In what way?"

"What made you put on that chain armor? And your eyes look so strange! Ah, promise me that you will stay here and obey the men left to guard you! You know the way to the secret armory. Fly to it at the first sound of firing. No one knows how this is going to end. I would not give a rupee for the word of any soldier in Allahabad. Promise, or I shall not be able to keep my mind on what is before me."

"I promise that only in the matter of life and death will I stir. Oh, impulsively, why was I not born a man!"

"I much prefer you as you are," he smiled, kissed her hand, and took his place among the eager revolutionists.

"Kit," said Winnie when the women were alone, "that man loves you!"

"And, Winnie, girl, if anything happens to him it will kill me!" Kathlyn wrapped her arms about her sister.

Fundita solemnly gave each of the girls a dagger.

"What is this for?" Kathlyn asked. "If my lord falls there will be worse things than death in store for us!" Fundita was again the fatalist. "My husband strikes openly now. He must win or die."

"Wait! Rebellion! Great clamor and shouting before the palace stairs! Give us Umballa and the Council!"

"Give us the gutter rat, Durga Ram!"

"We will bury him with the swine!"

"Umballa!"

From one end of the city to the other there was turmoil.

Umballa heard the shouting and at first did not understand, but soon the truth came to him. The city was in revolt. He summoned what servants he could trust and armed them. And when the captain of the guard entered to seize Umballa he was himself overpowered. The dispatch with which this was accomplished stunned the soldiers who knew not what to do without their leader.

When Lal Singh staggered into the house of Ramabai holding his side in mortal agony, owing, Kathlyn felt the recurrence of that strange duality which she had first known in the Temple of the Lion.

"We have failed!" whispered Lal Singh. "The palace soldiers betrayed us! All are prisoners, shortly to be shot."

"Food and water there!"

"Food?" And thus Lal Singh gave up his cobbler's boot.

As in a dream Kathlyn ran from the house into the street. Winnie would have followed but Fundita clung to her refusing to let her go. The story look in Kathlyn's eyes had warned Fundita of the futility of trying to coerce her.

With the sun breathing in lanes of light against the ancient chair armor, her golden hair flying behind her like a cloud, on, on Kathlyn ran, never stumbling, never faltering, till she came out into the square before the palace. Like an Amazon of old she called to the scattering revolutionists, called, harangued, smothered them under her scorn and contempt, and finally roused them to frenzy. She became again in their eyes the white goddess whom no beast nor trap could harm; and they would have gone to the gates of hell at a word from her. And many did.

In her madness Kathlyn turned the tide; and when her father's arm closed round her she sank insensible upon his breast.

CHAPTER XX.

A Goddess in Armor.

They tell of it to this day in Allahabad. To be sure, they will elaborate and prevaricate, twist and distort, as only the Asiatic knows how, having an innate horror of brevity and directness; but the basic truth of Kathlyn's exploit is held intact. The hoary old beggar who sits with his beggar's bowl near the steps of the mosque, loquacious, verbose, and flowery, for an Allahabad piece will tell you the tale, which happened all of 30 years ago.

"Thanks, huzoor!" he will begin, carefully scrutinizing the coin and testing its solidity between two fine rows of teeth for a man of seventy.

"Ah, that was a day! It was like a day I knew in Delhi, when I was a child, for I saw the great Mutiny. I saw the powder magazine."

"Ah, yes, huzoor, it is about the white goddess that you wish to know. But help me over to Ali's coffee house, for it is hot here, and it is a long story."

So you take the old rascal over to and seat him under the umbrellas of Ali, and you will buy him a sugar drink and a smoke from a water bottle, he having brought forth suggestively a cracked amber mouthpiece.

"Huzoor, she came out of nowhere, in a chair armor, that shone like rippling water in the sunshine. She was tall and lithe and vigorous, and as beautiful as a dream of paradise."

"When we saw the sahibs and Ramabai trapped by the cowardly soldiers of the palace we found ourselves without a head. The men who led us had vanished. We huddled like sheep, scattered, formed, fired aimlessly, began to run away. And brave Lal Singh, with a bullet through his stomach, staggered off. We were without hope. We were brave enough, but bravery has to be directed. We had only part of Ramabai's plans."

And what about this man Ahmed?"

"As the kite flies, he ran back to the house of Ramabai when everything had apparently come to an end. For Ahmed loved the white goddess even as you and I love life. He was brave, but a serpent is—wily. Did not the white queen of all the English take him a bit of copper to wear on his breast because he was wise as well as brave?"

The old beggar tilted his cup with out reaching it with his lips and let the sweetened water trickle down his throat.

"When one is old, one is always thirsty," he observed. "To go on. So there were, like sheep. The majority of us did not have sense enough to run away. Huzoor, Umballa had lined up the white men and Ramabai against the wall in the throne room and was about to send them to their gods, when suddenly I noticed a commotion in the rear of us. We were thrown about like sticks in a whirlpool."

"And then I saw her! Ah, protector of the poor, you white people rule the world because you always know what you want and when you want it. But it is not natural for us brown people to think and act quickly at the same time. I saw her; and I thought at first that the gates of paradise had opened and Allah himself had set her down among us!"

The water bubbles in the bowl of the pipe and a thin stream of smoke trickles from his bearded lips. You must have patience, for he will tell this tale only in his own fashion.

"Straight to the palace steps she ran, waving her arms. Behold! She spoke to us in her own tongue, but Allah is witness that we understood what she was saying! First we grew ashamed, then we stopped running, then we became men, huzoor. The lead tubes began to speak again; and we, too, found our voices. With yells we followed. And there was battle."

battle, battle to the very foot of the throne.

"She threw herself between the leveled guns and her people. The soldiers could not fire. And Umballa, seeing that in truth he had lost this time—Umballa fled toward the corridors, and none was quick enough to prevent him."

"But we went shouting after him, through this corridor and that. We could not find him. It seems he escaped through one of the chambers in the zenana."

A shrilling of fifes and a rattling of drums distract you and break in upon the story. A company of trim, wiry Gurkhas tramp past, and you know by the flag they carry under whose rule Allahabad works out its destiny today.

"What became of the captain of the guards?"

"He was ordered to the arena. He was to do so. Huzoor, I am thirsty again."

And you buy him another cup of sweetened water.

BEST METHOD FOR CABBAGE

Culinary Expert Tells How the Vegetable May Be Served Up in Appetizing Way.

Cabbage, and other vegetables that form into heads, should be soaked in cold water, heads down, to which salt or a little vinegar has been added. This will drive out worms or insects if any are in hiding among the leaves. Half an hour is long enough to allow the vegetables to remain in the water. Take one-half or one-quarter of the head of cabbage, according to quantity required, and shave it down fine, as for slaw, put it in very cold water, enough to just cover it, and let it stand until crisp. Pour off this water and add fresh cold water to barely cover it and place over the fire cover and bring quickly to boiling then remove cover and boil rapidly until it begins to look clear, pour off the water, season to taste with salt and pepper, add butter generously a tablespoonful to two cupfuls of cabbage, and turn into a heated dish and serve. Hot cream, cream sauce, sour cream sauce or cheese sauce may be served with it, but it is very delicate and pleasing to the taste served plain with butter and seasoning. If any is left over chill thoroughly and serve as a salad with green peppers or lettuce or string beans or peas or fresh tomatoes using French dressing—Ada Ames Willis

DISHES FOR SUMMER

MENU SHOULD BE SUITED TO TEMPERATURE.

Some Hints That May Help Housewife to Set Out a Tempting Meal That Will Be Enjoyed by Family.

In winter the curling steam from floury potatoes, the fragrant odor from the uncovered joint, the rich brown gravy, are all attractive, but in hot weather—ugh!

Here are some practical hints which may help. None is expensive.

First, the table! It is the setting to a meal, and should be made to look as cool and as attractive as possible. Make it look "inviting" in every sense, with flowers, fish and ferns. Little ferns are cheap enough. Regularly watered, occasionally repotted, and given two or three drops of castor oil four times a year, they are a permanent possession.

Now, for the food. Have you tried cold soup? It must be well strained free from fat, of medium thickness. This makes a most satisfying summer dish.

Cold meat is not attractive, and stews and hashes are worse—in summer! After a joint has appeared once it is best to cut the meat into very thick slices, and trim into outlet shapes, and fry as you would do fish, after dipping into egg and bread crumbs. Potatoes, too, are much better mashed, cut into squares, and baked till the outsides are a nice brown.

Fish should always be served with a frill of parsley or lettuce leaves. A sliced tomato, some watercress, some pieces of lemon—this at once tempts a tired man to eat.

Salads and salad dressings are most important adjuncts to food in summer. Give a well-made salad the man for whom the cold mutton! Here is a simple, yet quite nice, salad. It dispenses with other vegetables. Slice up a small cooked cauliflower, two or three potatoes, two lettucees, one large tomato, a beetroot and a cucumber. Add a little finely scraped horse radish.

So, with the table nicely laid, attractive with ferns and flowers, a spotless tablecloth and the food daintily put before him, the breadwinner is certain to be more than satisfied.

Hot Water Sponge Cake.

Beat two eggs till very light, add one cup sugar (granulated) and stir all in. Then have in your sifter one cup pastry flour, one teaspoon cream of tartar and one half teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt. Sift all into the egg and sugar and stir till all mixed in, then add, a little at a time, one half cup hot water then one teaspoon vanilla or any flavor. Put in pan 5x9x3 inches and bake it once in moderate oven. Grease your pan before you begin to make the cake put paper in bottom of pan and grease that too. Measure flour before sifting. You can bake this cake in a larger tin and use for jelly roll or Washington pie tins. It just fills two large sized ones. You could put part of dough in small size round tin for a Washington pie for two and the rest in a smaller loaf tin. Frost as you like.

Combination Salad.

Pare and slice potatoes that have been cooked with their jackets on. Wash and remove the skins from one green pepper, then cut in narrow shreds with a pair of scissors. Toss the potatoes and pepper lightly to gather season with salt and pepper and dress with French dressing. Pile lightly in the center of a salad bowl and surround with a circle of thinly sliced tomatoes, also marinated. If preferred this salad may be arranged on individual plates.

Sliced Rhubarb.

A way to prepare rhubarb for using with fruit is asked by a reader. Rhubarb is picked according to the following directions: would be suitable. Wipe skin and cut up two and a half pounds of rhubarb. Put this in a preserving kettle with two pounds of sugar, seven eighths cup vinegar, one teaspoon cinnamon and half a teaspoon ground cloves. Bring to boiling point and let simmer until as thick as marmalade. Fill jelly glasses with mixture, cool and seal.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

One level teaspoonful sugar, one heaped teaspoonful mustard six table spoonfuls vinegar. Cupful of cream, half teaspoonful salt, two eggs, pinch of red pepper. Mix sugar, mustard salt, pepper with a little of the cream. Beat eggs lightly, add them with rest of cream, stir in carefully the vinegar. Put bowl in a pan of boiling water keep stirring till it thickens, do not let it boil or it will curdle. Put in an airtight jar and place in a cool place.

Chicken Mold.

The mold is made with any remainder of the chickens, cut in dice and molded with ham, hard boiled eggs cut in quarters and pieces of pickled walnut, in a jelly made with the stock and a little gelatin. Set on ice till wanted, then turn out and serve garnished with watercress.

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut bread in one-half inch slices, trim and shape as desired and spread with butter and cheese. Place two slices together, toast in toaster and serve.

MAIL AROUND THE HOUSE

If you have difficulty in making your pancakes or griddle cakes brown to a turn add a spoonful of sugar or half a spoonful of molasses to the batter and note how easily and prettily they brown. The bit of sugar or molasses does not change the taste or proportions of other ingredients.

Waxed paper is a good thing to wrap about the articles of food before placing them in the refrigerator. It should also be wrapped about cheese and like edibles that must be kept in a dry place.

Fly specks and dirt on mirror surfaces may be rubbed off with a cream made of whiting and alcohol.

When the strainer on the kitchen faucet refuses to work well try a vinegar bath. The deposit from the water has clogged the tiny openings, and no amount of brushing will clear them so well as an overnight soaking in a cupful of vinegar.

Canadian Pudding.

The Story

We cinched the exclusive publication rights to Louis Joseph Vance's new sensation, The Trey O' Hearts—we did it at a price that staggered other publishers—biggest sum ever paid for a serial of its kind.

The Pictures

The Universal Film Manufacturing Co. pronounced The Trey O' Hearts the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny

You read a paper regularly. Read ours and get all the soul-stirring, heart-gripping installments of The Trey O' Hearts—it sets a mile mark in literature and it won't cost you a penny more to read it.

Overshadowed

"The Fortune Hunter"—"The Black Bag"—"The Brass Bowl"—Louis Joseph Vance wrote 'em all. You know what millions thought of these stories. You know how they gripped—thrilled and inspired. But The Trey O' Hearts overshadows them all. Vance has set himself a mark in this story he'll never beat and we doubt if even he, master of the written word, will ever pen another like it. Action—plot and telling, all combine to push The Trey O' Hearts into the top notch of the best sellers in record time.

Mental Back Somersaults

No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of The Trey O' Hearts one inch ahead of the words you're reading or the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way whether you're reading the story or seeing the pictures.

Superhuman Imagination

The imagination of this man Vance is superhuman—surprise is too mild a word to describe situations The Trey O' Hearts is filled with to overflowing. BRUMBAUGH TOLD THAT LIQUOR MEN SAY HE IS "SAFE"

DESCRIBED BY REPUBLICAN LEADERS AS "ONLY MO-

BARTENDERS WEAR BUTTONS

Washington Party State Chairman in
Vigorous Open Letter Calls on Republican Nominee for Governor to
Make Honest Statement and Tell
People of State Just Where He Stands and Whether He Has Any
rose.

Philadelphia, August 4.—Martin G. Brumbaugh, Republican nominee for governor, was told in an open letter addressed to him by A. Nevin Detrich to-day, that bartenders were wearing his campaign buttons and that the liquor people from the distillers and wholesalers down to the retailers were raising money and working for his election.

The Washington Party State chairman told Dr. Brumbaugh that the Republican leaders were circulating the statement that the Brumbaugh declaration for local option was "only molasses to catch flies."

Detrich asked Dr. Brumbaugh just what his declaration for a workmen's compensation act meant. He called Brumbaugh's attention to the fact that State Senator William E. Crow, the man who killed the workmen's compensation act at the last session of the State legislature, was now the Republican State chairman and working ardently for Brumbaugh. Brumbaugh was also told that McNichol, the Penrose boss, was working for him; that Vare, the machine leader of Philadelphia, was for him; that the entire Republican gang was passing around the word that he was safe of these facts, Detrich

asks Dr. Brumbaugh just where he stands. "It is very important that the people of Pennsylvania are honestly advised by you as to your real position in the campaign," declares Detrich.

The Washington Party chairman asks for a prompt reply.

The open letter to Dr. Brumbaugh is as follows:

Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh,

Dear Sir:

The exigencies of the political campaign demand that certain information which you alone can give be handed promptly to the people of Pennsylvania.

In the only statement you have given the public relative to your position as a candidate, you say, first, that you have "no entangling alliances," and, second, that you favor a workmen's compensation law, a child labor law, and a local option law.

It is a well-known fact that "entangling alliances" in Pennsylvania politics mean association with the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine. Do you disown association with this machine which gave you its full and trusting support at the Republican primaries?

Do you favor the sort of workmen's compensation act which was killed by the activities of Senator William E. Crow, who is chairman of the party whose nomination you hold for governor, and which bill was the result of the labors of the Pennsylvania Industrial Commission and endorsed by the State Federation of Labor and the legislative committee of the Washington and Republican parties? Or do you merely favor a workmen's compensation act such as is satisfactory to the big corporate interests?

Do you favor a child labor law such as has been prepared and widely disseminated by the Pennsylvania Child Labor Association, of which Jasper Y. Brinton is president and Paul M. Furman secretary, or do you favor the sort of child labor legislation proposed by the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, which is headed by Joseph R. Grundy, whose mills at Bristol, Pa., are largely operated by minor children?

Do you favor a local option law with the county as a unit, such as proposed by the Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania, or do you merely favor "local option?"

Will you, if elected governor, use the power of your office to secure the passage of the above legislation which is so important to the social and industrial welfare and consequently to the real prosperity of our great state?

The above questions deserve your careful attention and prompt reply as there are many people in Pennsylvania who believe you to be a man of high character and deep moral convictions and who earnestly desire to know your real position as regards your association with the political machine which has so long and Pennsylvania in its grasp, and your real stand upon the questions of vital importance enumerated above.

Permit me to give you some facts of which you may not be aware:

Your candidacy is entirely acceptable to the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine. The leaders of the machine and their active workers are enthusiastically for you. The attaches of the various departments at Harrisburg are working for your election in season and out because of the assurance from somewhere that they will not be interfered with.

The chairman of the state committee of the Republican party who, as stated above, was the chief instrument in killing the workmen's compensation bill in the last legislature, is earnestly and enthusiastically for your election. The Grundles of Pennsylvania are just as enthusiastic and earnest in your support as are the others.

Finally, the liquor interests of Pennsylvania from the heads of the big brewing and distilling companies down through the ranks of the wholesale and retail dealers, to the bartenders and waiters in the cafes, are wearing your buttons, attempting in every way to gather support to your standard. An official of the Beerdoll Brewing Company in Philadelphia is quoted as having recently made the following statement: "The liquor interests of Pennsylvania are solidly for Brumbaugh for governor and our contributions will all go to him." Why?

Machine leaders in the state say you are "safe" on the liquor question. Senator Charles A. Snyder, of Schuylkill county, is quoted as having told the Republican committee of his county that your local option declaration was "molasses to catch flies."

It is very important that the people of Pennsylvania are honestly advised by you as to your real position in the campaign and I trust that the questions asked in this letter and the facts set forth may be carefully considered by you and that they may receive from you a prompt reply.

Very truly yours,
A. NEVIN DETRICH.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been Eating too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and du' misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they becomes sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sic headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular uric acid cases. It is inexpensive and not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

Notice to Advertisers!

A new rate for advertising will be in effect on Saturday, August 1st, 1914, and copies of this rate in pamphlet form will be ready for distribution August 1, 1914. This new rate is made necessary by the greatly increased circulation, and cost of publication of the Progress. The present circulation is about five times larger than a year ago. Many new features have been, and will be added, such as "Bud" Fisher's "Mutt and Jeff," a daily news illustration service, a free cut, or illustration service for advertisers, (proofs of which may be obtained at this office), and last but not least, our daily news service; all of which will make the Daily Progress a real up to the minute daily. The Progress goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and has an excellent circulation in most of the homes throughout the surrounding country, so that the new rate will not meet with much, if any disapproval.

FIRST HOME RUN OFF MATTY

"Wee Willie" Sudhoff Turned the Trick at the Polo Grounds, but Did Not Win His Game.

One day two young hurlers were engaged in a regular pitchers' battle. They were both right-handed, but that ended the resemblance. One was over six feet tall, the other was five feet and about two inches over.

On June 21, 1901, at the Polo Grounds, the home of the New York Giants, these two hurlers battled for five innings without allowing a run. In the sixth the visitors managed to get a man on with their midget hurler up, the little chap who had been pitching his head off and come in from his task with the sweat streaming down his face.

Brushing out his eyes with his fists, he picked up his little bat and walked up to the plate. The big pitcher smiled a rather pitying smile, but didn't let up on his speed. He flashed the ball through with all the stuff he had, and the little fellow swung at it with all the stuff he had—and his teammates declare with his eyes shut. However, an awful crack followed, and the ball sped away beyond any fielder, and the pony pitcher galloped around the bases, chasing the other fellow in.

When he reached the home plate he paused and posed for a moment, then drew himself up to his full height—five feet two inches—and grinned at the big hurler, and the big hurler

smiled back at him, but it was a smile full of astonishment, for this was the first time a home run had ever been made off the delivery of Christy Mathewson, for the big fellow was none other than the now famous "Big Six." And the midget, the little hurler who banged the ball, was "Wee Willie" Sudhoff, then pitching for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Wee Willie" was so swelled up that he forgot all about the art of pitching, and before he landed on earth again the Giants had tied the score in their half of the inning and won the game in the ninth by the score of 3 to 2. This was the only homer made off the delivery of Matty in two seasons; in the year 1902 the batters of the National failed to connect with his curves for a four-bagger. So little "Willie" wore the title proudly for a couple of seasons.

LONE SPECTATOR WAS READY

Umpire Hart Relates Peculiar Experience in Western League—Bleacherite Was "All Set."

William Hart, the new umpire in the National league, who is making good in fine fashion, has been identified with baseball more than 30 years. Until recently he still was able to pitch, and in his day he was one of the best twirlers in the business.

This is not Hart's first experience as an umpire. Several years ago he umpired in the old Western league for a season and then went back to pitching again. The veteran is full of queer stories of his experiences. Recently he told this one on himself:

"One day when I was umpiring in the Western league I got to Kansas City. The club had been going poorly, and when the game time came around there were only eight spectators in the grand stand and one man sitting in the bleachers. He had an umbrella over him, for the day was stifling hot.

"When it came time to announce the batteries, I announced them to the eight patrons in the grand stand, and then I thought I would make the announcement to the bleachers. So I walked down to where the solitary bleacherite was sitting, and, taking off my cap, I yelled:

"Ladies and gentlemen: The batteries for today are White and Black for Kansas City, Green and Brown for Omaha!"

"The one lone bleacherite made a gesture with his arm and replied:

"I'm ready. Go on with the game."

Another Pretzel Battery. Der Herr Pitcher Schaufalaufe and der Herr Catcher Ehlinghale have signed with Manager Herzog of the Cincinnati Reds.

FOR SHORT DOUBLE-HEADERS

Critic Advocates Seven Innings Each Where Two Contests are Played on Same Afternoon.

Why not limit the double-header games to seven innings each? It's a scheme that has been tried out in the Southern leagues with great success.

Two seven-inning games in one afternoon would give the average fan just about as much baseball as he could comfortably absorb. It wouldn't force the ball player to the extreme limit of his endurance, and, best of all, it would enable the fan to get home in time for a warm dinner.

Cutting the double-header games to seven innings would do no one harm. It would do plenty of good. Cutting off four innings from an afternoon's baseball session would mean lessening the playing period about one hour and, therefore, the pasture would end before darkness settled over the land.

The season of double-headers is now upon us. Every fan is keen about taking in a bargain bill, but along about the fourth or fifth inning of the second game the exhibition becomes monotonous. Of course, the greatest majority of the fans stick to the bitter finish, but they stay not so much because their ball appetite isn't satiated, but because they want to see just how the game will finish.

Most double-headers begin about 2 p. m., allowing something over two hours for each game and a 15 minute intermission between combats. It means that play doesn't end until about 6:30. That means that the fan doesn't get home until from 7:15 to 8 p. m. owing to the delay in getting out of the crowded park and the usual delay caused by the slow moving of a fleet of special street cars. And every housewife is fully agreed that 7:15 to 8 p. m. is 'too darned late for any man to expect his wife to keep dinner simmering."

If the games were cut two innings each the playing period would be lessened about an hour, which would mean that the final innings of the second game would not have to be played by torchlight and that father would get home on time to dine with the rest of the family.

The seven-inning double-header idea probably will prove to be a popular one with the fans, and it is likely that the agitation assumes sufficient voice that the ruling powers in baseball will hear it and amend their laws so that seven-inning double-headers will be the rule starting with the 1916 season.

Fests of Sox Pitchers. A notable fact in connection with the White Sox box staff is that four of its members have pitched a one-hit game this year. The four are Scott, Cicotte, Benz, and Faber. In addition Benz has a no-hit game and Russell a two-hit game.

Many Players in One Game. Thirty-one players appeared in the recent game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds. The game lasted 110 minutes.

LEON AMES PITCHING WELL

Former New York Giant is Having Good Season With Cincinnati Reds — Is Not All in as Thought.

Leon Ames, the former pitcher of the New York Giants, has had a good season with the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds under Manager Charley Herzog have been a surprise in the early stages of the pennant fight and although they have slipped down some of late are bound to finish better than they did last year. Herzog has done well with the material he has on hand and has met with a good reception in Cincinnati. Ames was thought to be all in when McGraw let him out, but his box work since he joined the Reds would indicate that he is far from the end of his string.

ROBBER CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS

Howe's jewelry store. Found Some of the Goods.

Etzweiler finally took the officers to the hiding place of some of the goods he had purloined. These were found in a shed at the brick works, on the top floor of which the officers found the Howe spectacles, viands from the three refrigerators which had been robbed, a water bucket and several other articles.

The police believe that they now have in custody the man who has been doing most of the petty thievery that has aroused the citizens in the past month, and that the evidence against Etzweiler is strong enough to send him over the mountain.

An Old Offender. Etzweiler was arrested on May 9, 1913, for the theft of a bicycle. He was tried at the December court and sentenced to six months in the county jail, his time expiring on June 15.

The offer of a reward of $100 made by the Jewelers Protective association for the arrest of any one robbing a member of the association will be made good, and the money will be divided between Chief McHenry and Policeman Aldey.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE Vance G. Welch, of Mt. Zion, Greeted by a Host of Friends.

Mt. Zion never had a pleasanter occasion or a more cheerful crowd than that gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vance G. Welch on Tuesday as a surprise birthday party.

Relative, friends and neighbors began to arrive at about 11:00 and continued coming until all had gathered. At first Mr. Welch did not understand what it meant, but very soon it began to dawn upon him that he had reached another milestone in life, and he submitted to the inevitable and took it as a kindly remembrance of his 39th birthday.

More than eighty persons, adults, young people and children, gladdened the occasion. The dinner hour was one that will not soon be forgotten. A long table was constructed under the trees. The table was loaded with many good things, a blessing which was invoked, and then you ought to have seen the hungry crowd, a sight that would tax the capacity of the best camera. The provision was inexhaustible and the diners finally had to desist.

It was a beautiful day, and with the cheerful company and the mountain top scenery it could not help but awaken a grateful feeling in the breast to the bountiful giver of good and perfect gifts.

The day with its enjoyment will long be remembered by the friends, and the Welch family. May Mr. and Mrs. Welch live and see many more happy birthdays.

Tables for refreshments were set on the lawn, which was lighted with electric lights for the occasion. The decorations were beautiful. A violin was furnished by Sheeders and they danced in the house, while some original games furnished much amusement.

Because of the absence of Rev. and Mrs. C. R. Allenbach, the missionary meeting of the Lutheran church was made a social affair and held at Frank Chorpene's last evening. The meeting was led by Miss Larue Chorpene, the subject being, "Resources of the King". This was followed by a Bible lesson, in which all took part. Then the business part of the meeting was attended to, and delightful refreshments served.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

She tried to draw away her hands. "I love you, Kathlyn!" "No, no!" She struggled back from him.

"With all my heart and soul. You are as irresistible as breathing. And I want you for my wife, Kit!"

"No, John! Perhaps my poor father is right. A curse of some sort seems to be hanging over us. For look: how many times has everything looked bright, only to turn out like this! The cable saying that Winnie was on her way, the brigands, Ahmed's long sleep, the mistake this afternoon of the mahouts. I wonder if my own God has forsaken us?"

"Kit!"

"No, no! I refuse to let you be dragged into this. I want you to go, to go now while there is time. I command it. As you say, we cannot tell what may happen. The rebellion may prove a fizzle, but one way or the other, there will be death. I want you to leave us, for we are indeed accursed!"

The man at her side laughed. To her ears it was the same laughter she had heard in the desert. In her heart she knew that he would not go. Was she glad?

"My life is mine, Kit," he said, releasing her hands, "and I give it to you. But I promise not to speak of love again till you are safe and sound on the broad Pacific. There are Ahmed and Lal Singh and Ramabai, and I will be their lieutenant. By the Lord Harry, besides yourself there is only one thing I want: my hand round the throat of the black devil who has caused all this. He seems to bear a charmed life. Never have I had a good opportunity to get near him. But patience!"

"Let us return to father and Winnie," she said. "Besides, perhaps I ought not to have come out here at all."

And Winnie! The change which had taken place in the child was the most remarkable of all to Kathlyn. Winnie was a woman, quiet, brave, unassuming, and Kathlyn now realized that the child had been flighty simply because they had coddled her and given way to her whims in the old days. The old days! Ah, could either of them ever go back to the placid, humdrum contentment of home after all this strife?

During this talk in the garden Umballa had not been inactive. The white people could not possibly have left the city. They were still within the walls. For all that he had reasoned shrewdly regarding the house of Ramabai, he could not dismiss the possibility from his mind. So at length he ordered his captain of the guard roughly and with curses—for Umballa was not pleasant in his cups—to proceed at once to the house of Ramabai and learn if they were there, or had been to Basundalo all the servants in the house till the truth was dragged from their lips. Dead or alive!

The captain saluted and departed with his men. He was the same captain whom Umballa weeks before had marked for death because of his insolence. But the regent had dared not harm the man till real quiet was fully restored in Alahia. And well the captain knew this, knew that his master was only biding his time and that once Umballa had his desires his (the captain's) throat would not be worth a copper piece. But the captain was a gambler, and Umballa's rupees were as necessary to him as air and water. Still, if Umballa had hidden fangs, so had he. Let the regent strike

As Bruce and Kathlyn reached the door leading into the house they were met by Ramabai, whose face was grave.

"Ah, memsahib, you ought not to have come out here. You might be seen. Perhaps Umballa is merely playing with us, cat and mouse wise. He might have had more at his tongue's end, but he was destined not to utter it. The gate was flung open violently and the servant who had been watching the street burst in with the cry:

"Soldiers!"

The colonel, Winnie and Fundita appeared. For a moment they believed that Ramabai was going to guide them to the secret gallery. But suddenly he raised his hand and stared boldly at the gate. And by that sign Bruce and the colonel understood; Ramabai had taken up the dice to make his throw. The two men put their hands to their revolvers and waited.

Soon the captain and his men came rushing in only to stop short at a sign from Ramabai.

"Captain," he began, "Is Durga Ram a good master? Does he keep his promises?"

The captain turned and eyed his men.

"Does he look out for your welfare as an honest man should, or does he simply use you as his tools and dupes? For what does he want the soldiery? To guard the weak and the oppressed from the strong, or to fortify himself in such a manner that it will be easy for him to take what money he wishes and flee? Is he a good master who persecutes for his own ends?"

"Ramabai," said the captain, "speak out your thought frankly and clearly."

Thus challenged, Ramabai said: "Join our side, and tomorrow at dawn we will strike a blow for the betterment of Alahia!"

"And what of the old man in the dungeon?" dryly.

"Wait till we overthrow Umballa and the cowardly Council, then we shall speak of him. Well!" proudly and fearlessly.

"Ramabai," replied the captain, "I, too, will be frank. I will be loyal to the hand that pays me best, for I am not an Allahian by birth. I am a mercenary. I have said it."

"Be with me on the morrow and I promise out of my own chest will I pay you your arrears and earnest money for the future. On the other hand, what will you gain by taking us prisoners to Umballa?"

"My lord's word is known. I myself will take charge of the affairs at the palace, and Umballa shall go to the burning ghats. I will announce to him that I found you not. When you arrive at the palace you will find everything in readiness. But till you come I dare not lift a hand."

And at that moment he meant every word he said. Ramabai was the richest man in Alahia. He turned again to his men, to find that they were ready to follow Ramabai anywhere and at any time.

Ahmed, who knew the Asiatic heart thoroughly, could scarcely repress a smile. No matter. If they proved loyal to Ramabai on the morrow much would be forgiven.

The captain and his men departed, while Ramabai and his friends reentered the house, to find the imperturbable Lal Singh decked out in his lawful finery. He was Ramabai's right hand and the British raj vanished into nothingness.

"All is ready," he announced. "Dawn," replied Ramabai. "The servant go forth for the chupatties."

Dawn. The garden was filled with silent armed men. With Ramabai in the secret gallery were the chiefs. Ramabai indicated the blazing swords.

"My friends, choose among these weapons. The gems are nothing, but the steel is tried and true."

Lal Singh selected the simplest, saffron and sild the scabbard through his cummerbund.

As for Kathlyn, she could not keep her eyes off the beautiful chain cuirass which had once upon a time been worn by one of Fundita's forbears a warrior queen.

"Beautiful, beautiful," she exclaimed. "Fundita, may I put it on?" And tell me the story of the warrior queen. To be brave like that, to fight side by side with the man she loved!"

She put the cuirass on.

Quite involuntarily her eyes roved to Bruce, who was staring at her like one entranced. The hearts of both of them leaped, but their lips remained mute. There was, however, a message in their eyes which each read with equal clearness. Oh, to be free to be back in the old familiar world!

Lowly Fundita told the story. As she unfolded the tale Kathlyn experienced a strange exhilaration, unlike anything she had previously known. She wanted to snatch down one of the swords start out for the palace to stand in the midst of battle. And the odd part of it was this: exhilaration was not transient, it grew and expanded magically, like a fakir's peep tree.

The sky was yellow when the little army started off upon its desperate campaign. A guard was left behind for the women.

"God be with you," said Kathlyn, as she gave her hand to Bruce.

"Kathlyn, I'm afraid of you," he said earnestly.

"In what way?"

"What made you put on that chain armor? And your eyes look so strange! Ah, promise me that you will stay here and obey the men left to guard you! You know the way to the secret armory. Fly to it at the first sound of firing. No one knows how this is going to end. I would not give a rupee for the word of any soldier in Alahia. Promise, or I shall not be able to keep my mind on what is before me."

"I promise that only in the matter of life and death will I stir. Oh, impulsively, 'why was I not born a man!'"

"I much prefer you as you are," he smiled, kissed her hand, and took his place among the eager revolutionists.

"Kit," said Winnie when the women were alone, "that man loves you!"

"And, Winnie, girl, if anything happens to him it will kill me!" Kathlyn wrapped her arms about her sister.

Fundita solemnly gave each of the girls a dagger.

"What is this for?" Kathlyn asked. "If my lord falls there will be worse things than death in store for us!" Fundita was again the fatalist. "My husband strikes openly now. He must win or die."

"Wait! Rebellion! Great clamor and shouting before the palace stairs!"

"Give us Umballa and the Council!"

"Give us the gutter rat, Durga Ram!"

"We will bury him with the swine!"

"Umballa!"

From one end of the city to the other there was turmoil.

Umballa heard the shouting and at first did not understand, but soon the truth came to him. The city was in revolt. He summoned what servants he could trust and armed them. And when the captain of the guard entered to seize Umballa he was himself overpowered. The dispatch with which this was accomplished stunned the soldiers who knew not what to do without their leader.

When Lal Singh staggered into the house of Ramabai holding his side in mortal agony, owing, Kathlyn felt the recurrence of that strange duality which she had first known in the Temple of the Lion.

"We have failed!" whispered Lal Singh. "The palace soldiers betrayed us! All are prisoners, shortly to be shot."

"Food and water there!"

"Food!" And thus Lal Singh gave up his cobbler's boot.

As in a dream Kathlyn ran from the house into the street. Winnie would have followed, but Fundita clung to her, refusing to let her go. The story look in Kathlyn's eyes had warned Fundita of the futility of trying to coerce her.

With the sun breathing in lanes of light against the ancient chair armor, her golden hair flying behind her like a cloud, on, on Kathlyn ran, never stumbling, never faltering, till she came out into the square before the palace. Like an Amazon of old she called to the scattering revolutionists, called, harangued, smothered them under her scorn and contempt, and finally roused them to frenzy. She became again in their eyes the white goddess whom no beast nor trap could harm; and they would have gone to the gates of hell at a word from her. And many did.

In her madness Kathlyn turned the tide; and when her father's arm closed round her she sank insensible upon his breast.

CHAPTER XX.

A Goddess in Armor.

They told of it to this day in Alahia. To be sure, they will elaborate and prevaricate, twist and distort, as only the Asiatic knows how, having an innate horror of brevity and directness; but the basic truth of Kathlyn's exploit is held intact. The hoary old beggar who sits with his beggar's bowl near the steps of the mosque, loquacious, verbose, and flowery, for an 8-anna piece will tell you the tale, which happened all of 30 years ago.

"Thanks, huzoor!" he will begin, carefully scrutinizing the coin and testing its solidity between two fine rows of teeth for a man of seventy. "Ah, that was a day! It was like a day I knew in Delhi, when I was a child, for I saw the great Mutiny. I saw the powder magazine. Ah, yes, huzoor, it is about the white goddess that you wish to know. But help me over to Ali's coffee house, for it is hot here, and it is a long story."

So you take the old rascal over to and seat him under the umbrellas of Ali, and you will buy him a sugar drink and a smoke from a water bottle, he having brought forth suggestively a cracked amber mouthpiece.

"Huzoor, she came out of nowhere, in a chair armor, that shone like rippling water in the sunshine. She was tall and lithe and vigorous, and as beautiful as a dream of paradise."

"When we saw the sahibs and Ramabai trapped by the cowardly soldiers of the palace we found ourselves without a head. The men who led us had vanished. We huddled like sheep, scattered, formed, fired aimlessly, began to run away. And brave Lal Singh, with a bullet through his stomach, staggered off. We were without hope. We were brave enough, but bravery has to be directed. We had only part of Ramabai's plans."

And what about this man Ahmed?"

"As the kite flies, he ran back to the house of Ramabai when everything had apparently come to an end. For Ahmed loved the white goddess even as you and I love life. He was brave, but a serpent is—wily. Did not the white queen of all the English take him a bit of copper to wear on his breast because he was wise as well as brave?"

The old beggar tilted his cup with out reaching it with his lips and let the sweetened water trickle down his throat.

"When one is old, one is always thirsty," he observed. "To go on. So there were, like sheep. The majority of us did not have sense enough to run away. Huzoor, Umballa had lined up the white men and Ramabai against the wall in the throne room and was about to send them to their gods, when suddenly I noticed a commotion in the rear of us. We were thrown about like sticks in a whirlpool."

"And then I saw her! Ah, protector of the poor, you white people rule the world because you always know what you want and when you want it. But it is not natural for us brown people to think and act quickly at the same time. I saw her; and I thought at first that the gates of paradise had opened and Allah himself had set her down among us!"

The water bubbles in the bowl of the pipe and a thin stream of smoke trickles from his bearded lips. You must have patience, for he will tell this tale only in his own fashion.

"Straight to the palace steps she ran, waving her arms. Behold! She spoke to us in her own tongue, but Allah is witness that we understood what she was saying! First we grew ashamed, then we stopped running, then we became men, huzoor. The lead tubes began to speak again; and we, too, found our voices. With yells we followed. And there was battle."

battle, battle to the very foot of the throne.

"She threw herself between the leveled guns and her people. The soldiers could not fire. And Umballa, seeing that in truth he had lost this time—Umballa fled toward the corridors, and none was quick enough to prevent him."

"But we went shouting after him, through this corridor and that. We could not find him. It seems he escaped through one of the chambers in the zenana."

A shrilling of fifes and a rattling of drums distract you and break in upon the story. A company of trim, wiry Gurkhas tramp past, and you know by the flag they carry under whose rule Alahia works out its destiny today.

"What became of the captain of the guards?"

"He was ordered to the arena. He was to do so. Huzoor, I am thirsty again."

And you buy him another cup of sweetened water.

THE EXPRESS IS IN THIS TOWN AND IN TO STAY

For Seventy-five years—three-quarters of a century—the express has been the right-hand of the shippers of Commercial America. The Express came to Clearfield, Pa., in 1869 and it came to stay. For 45 years it has been the right-hand of Commercial Clearfield, Pa.

It is here to stay. The other day when reports went out that the express companies might retire from business, a protest went up. From whom this protest—the express companies? No! The merchants of the country—shippers everywhere—petitioned Congress that no action be taken that might have the effect of forcing the express companies to retire. Commercial organizations all over the land have joined in this appeal to Washington.

For Seventy-fivetyears in the past and for a good many more years in the future Express service will mean

BEST METHOD FOR CABBAGE

Culinary Expert Tells How the Vegetable May Be Served Up in Appetizing Way.

Cabbage, and other vegetables that form into heads, should be soaked in cold water, heads down, to which salt or a little vinegar has been added. This will drive out worms or insects if any are in hiding among the leaves. Half an hour is long enough to allow the vegetables to remain in the water. Take one-half or one-quarter of the head of cabbage, according to quantity required, and shave it down fine, as for slaw, put it in very cold water, enough to just cover it, and let it stand until crisp. Pour off this water and add fresh cold water to barely cover it and place over the fire cover and bring quickly to boiling then remove cover and boil rapidly until it begins to look clear, pour off the water, season to taste with salt and pepper, add butter generously a tablespoonful to two cupfuls of cabbage, and turn into a heated dish and serve. Hot cream, cream sauce, sour cream sauce or cheese sauce may be served with it, but it is very delicate and pleasing to the taste served plain with butter and seasoning. If any is left over chill thoroughly and serve as a salad with green peppers or lettuce or string beans or peas or fresh tomatoes using French dressing—Ada Ames Willis

DISHES FOR SUMMER

MENU SHOULD BE SUITED TO TEMPERATURE.

Some Hints That May Help Housewife to Set Out a Tempting Meal That Will Be Enjoyed by Family.

In winter the curling steam from floury potatoes, the fragrant odor from the uncovered joint, the rich brown gravy, are all attractive, but in hot weather—ugh!

Here are some practical hints which may help. None is expensive.

First, the table! It is the setting to a meal, and should be made to look as cool and as attractive as possible. Make it look "inviting" in every sense, with flowers, fish and ferns. Little ferns are cheap enough. Regularly watered, occasionally repotted, and given two or three drops of castor oil four times a year, they are a permanent possession.

Now, for the food. Have you tried cold soup? It must be well strained free from fat, of medium thickness. This makes a most satisfying summer dish.

Cold meat is not attractive, and stews and hashes are worse—in summer! After a joint has appeared once it is best to cut the meat into very thick slices, and trim into outlet shapes, and fry as you would do fish, after dipping into egg and bread crumbs. Potatoes, too, are much better mashed, cut into squares, and baked till the outsides are a nice brown.

Fish should always be served with a frill of parsley or lettuce leaves. A sliced tomato, some watercress, some pieces of lemon—this at once tempts a tired man to eat.

Salads and salad dressings are most important adjuncts to food in summer. With a well made salad the man for gives the cold mutton! Here is a simple, yet quite nice, salad. It dispenses with other vegetables. Slice up a small cooked cauliflower, two or three potatoes, two lettucees, one large tomato, a beetroot and a cucumber. Add a little finely scraped horse radish.

So, with the table nicely laid, attractive with ferns and flowers, a spotless tablecloth and the food daintily put before him, the breadwinner is certain to be more than satisfied.

Hot Water Sponge Cake.

Beat two eggs till very light, add one cup sugar (granulated) and stir all in. Then have in your sifter one cup pastry flour, one teaspoon cream of tartar and one half teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt. Sift all into the egg and sugar and stir till all mixed in, then add, a little at a time, one half cup hot water then one teaspoon vanilla or any flavor. Put in pan 5x9x3 inches and bake it once in moderate oven. Grease your pan before you begin to make the cake put paper in bottom of pan and grease that too. Measure flour before sifting. You can bake this cake in a larger tin and use for jelly roll or Washington pie tins. It just fills two large sized ones. You could put part of dough in small size round tin for a Washington pie for two and the rest in a smaller loaf tin. Frost as you like.

Combination Salad.

Pare and slice potatoes that have been cooked with their jackets on. Wash and remove the seeds from one green pepper, then cut in narrow shreds with a pair of scissors. Toss the potatoes and pepper lightly to gather season with salt and pepper and dress with French dressing. Pile lightly in the center of a salad bowl and surround with a circle of thinly sliced tomatoes, also marinated. If preferred this salad may be arranged on individual plates.

Sliced Rhubarb.

A way to prepare rhubarb for using with fruit is asked by a reader. Rhubarb is picked according to the following directions: would be suitable. Wipe skin and cut up two and a half pounds of rhubarb. Put this in a preserving kettle with two pounds of sugar, seven eighths cup vinegar, one teaspoon cinnamon and half a teaspoon ground cloves. Bring to boiling point and let simmer until as thick as marmalade. Fill jelly glasses with mixture, cool and seal.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

One level teaspoonful sugar, one heaped teaspoonful mustard six table spoonfuls vinegar. Cupful of cream, half teaspoonful salt, two eggs, pinch of red pepper. Mix sugar, mustard salt, pepper with a little of the cream. Beat eggs lightly, add them with rest of cream, stir in carefully the vinegar. Put bowl in a pan of boiling water keep stirring till it thickens, do not let it boil or it will curdle. Put in an airtight jar and place in a cool place.

Chicken Mold.

The mold is made with any remainder of the chickens, cut in dice and molded with ham, hard boiled eggs cut in quarters and pieces of pickled walnut, in a jelly made with the stock and a little gelatin. Set on ice till wanted, then turn out and serve garnished with watercress.

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut bread in one-half inch slices, trim and shape as desired and spread with soft cheese. Place two slices together, toast in toaster and serve.

MAIL AROUND THE HOUSE

If you have difficulty in making your pancakes or griddle cakes brown to a turn add a spoonful of sugar or half a spoonful of molasses to the batter and note how easily and prettily they brown. The bit of sugar or molasses does not change the taste or proportions of other ingredients.

Waxed paper is a good thing to wrap about the articles of food before placing them in the refrigerator. It should also be wrapped about cheese and like edibles that must be kept in a dry place.

Fly specks and dirt on mirror surfaces may be rubbed off with a cream made of whiting and alcohol.

When the strainer on the kitchen faucet refuses to work well try a vinegar bath. The deposit from the water has clogged the tiny openings, and no amount of brushing will clear them so well as an overnight soaking in a cupful of vinegar.

Canadian Pudding.

Make sauce of one quart sliced apples, one third cup sugar, one-third cup water, a little nutmeg; stew gently, then pour into buttered pudding dish and pour over it the following batter. One pint flour, one egg, salt, one cup milk, two level teaspoons sugar, one-half tablespoon melted butter, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one half teaspoon soda, bake in a moderate oven; serve with the following sauce: One-half pint boiling water, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon cornstarch, teaspoon of butter, soak this till it thickens, then cool before adding one cup sugar beaten with yolks of two eggs. Lastly whip in stiffly, beaten whites of eggs.
